PRICE TWO CENTS

LOCAL BANKER IS CALLED BY DEATH

Joel H. Matlock, President of Jackson County Loan & Trust Company, Passes Away.

ACTIVE IN AFFAIRS OF CITY

Deceased was Prominent in Church Activities and was Widely Known Throughout County.

Joel H. Matlock, aged sixty-eight years, president of the Jackson County Loan & Trust Company, a well known churchman and prominent in politics and the affairs of the city and county, died at 5:55 o'clock Sunday afternoon at his home on North Walnut street following a three months' illness with heart trouble. For the last week his condition had been critical but he remained conscious until the end.

Mr. Matlock was endowed with unusual business ability and was interested in a number of local enterprises. He was a man of affairs in whom confidence was imposed by all who had occasion to deal with him. His death removes one of Seymour's best citizens and is a profound loss to the entire county.

Joel H. Matlock was a native of Jackson county and spent practically his entire life on his native soil. He was born August 17, 1847 on a farm two miles west of Clearspring. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Matlock, were early pioneers of this county and were prominent in assisting in laying the foundation for the great community to which this county has rapidly developed. When he was a few months old his parents removed to Salt Creek township where they lived until he was twelve years of age. He entered the schools in that township but in 1859 his parents returned to Clearspring so their son might have the advantages offered by the Academy which was conducted there. At that time the school was regarded as one of unusual merit and thoroughness and the course was similar to that now given in preparatory schools to colleges.

Mr. Matlock enlisted in the ranks of the Union Army before he was sixteen years of age and heard the call of patriotism in an unusual manner. It was on February 22, 1864 that a Washington Birthday celebration was being held at Clearspring. Following the celebration he and several of his companions decided to enlist and went to Medora. From there they came to Seymour on a hand car and went to Columbus where they joined the 120th Indiana Regiment of Volunteers. Two weeks later his regiment was sent to the South where it joined Sherman's army. He spent two years in the Southern Campaign and participated in several sharp engagements, the most serious of which was the battle at Franklin, Tenn., where the Union forces under General Schofield met Hood's army. He received this honorable discharge on January 8, 1866 and immediately returned to Clearspring where he entered the academy for one term. For three years he was engaged as a school teacher, two winters in Jackson county and one year in Iowa.

Upon his return from the West Mr. Matlock engaged in the mercantile business at Houston for four years. In 1871 he moved to Brownstown to accept the position of deputy county clerk which place he occupied for eight years. At the expiration of his term he entered the county auditor's office and served nine years as deputy to B. F. Price, of this city. He was elected auditor in 1888 and served two terms of four years each.

In the spring of 1897 Mr. Matlock became connected with a construction company at Wabash and served as secretary for one year. In the following year he went to Indianapolis where he lived until 1900. He then returned to Seymour and organized the Jackson County Loan & Trust Company and was elected to its presidency. He held that office continuously until his death. As a banker he was very successful and through his efforts the bank became one of the leading trust companies in southern Indiana.

In 1868 Mr. Matlock was united in marriage to Miss Mary Alberta Scott, who serves him. He also leaves one son, Price Matlock, cashier of the Trust Company, and four daughters, Mrs. Leroy Miller, Mrs. Cora Hunsucker, Mrs. K. D. Mann, of this city, and Mrs. E. C. Wareing, of Cincinnati. Seven grandchildren also survive.

For many years Mr. Matlock has been a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church and when he moved to this city came identified with the local congregation. During his residence here he was a member of the official board and for several years was president of the body. He was deeply interested in the advancement of religious affairs and devoted much of his time to his church interests. The character of his life is portrayed by expressions uttered during the closing days of his life. Recently he told members of his family that he had tried to live his best and was ready to meet the end. His many acts of charity were done quietly. Scores of people have been helped by him and his benevolent deeds were known only to himself and those who were assisted.

Mr. Matlock was actively identified in democratic politics for years. He served as county chairman several times and in 1896 was elected chairman of the Fourth Congressional District. In the same year he represented the Fourth Indiana district as delegate to the National Democratic Convention.

Mr. Matlock was a member of the Free & Accepted Masonic fraternal order, was affiliated with the Council, Chapter and was a charter member of the Seymour Commandery Knights Templar. He was also a member of the Brownstown lodge of Knights of Pythias. For a number of years he was a leading member of Ellsworth Post of the Grand Army of the Re-

TWO SENTENCED TO THE REFORMATORY

George Bennett Draws Term of from 2 to 21 Years and Charles Howard Gets 10 to 20 Years.

BOTH ENTERED GUILTY PLEAS

Three Vacancies on the Grand Jury Filled by Sheriff and Body Begins Deliberation.

With the grand jury in session, a jury trial in progress and a score or more of witnesses around the court room and jury room, the court house was the center of much activity today when the October term of the Jackson circuit court convened. The grand jury was sworn by Judge Swails at the morning session and after the brief instructions were given retired to begin its grind. Nothing was given out as to the nature of the cases under investigation. However, quite a number of witnesses from Medora and Carr township were known to have been summoned to appear.

Three of the grand jurors drawn by the jury commissioners were unable to serve and Jerry McOsker, Charles F. Robertson and Samuel Houston were summoned by Sheriff Robertson to fill the vacancies.

The regular petit jury was put to work at today's session to hear the case of the Hillsboro State Bank against Emma Nola Davis, of Kurtz. It was claimed that she signed a note as security given by her husband, Allen T. Davis, in payment for a horse. The note was taken up by the bank and the security failed to settle same, on the grounds that the animal was not sound. The case had not gone to the jury at 3:30 o'clock.

George Bennett, charged with grand larceny, was brought into court this afternoon and pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced from two to fourteen years in the State Reformatory. He was arrested at Monon after the disappearance of a horse and buggy belonging to Prof. Ed Ude, of Dudleytown, several weeks ago.

Charles Howard, who was charged with committing a burglary in Seymour, was arraigned and pleaded guilty. He was sentenced by Judge Swails to a term of from ten to twenty years in the Reformatory.

Cecil Elmore, charged with assault and battery with intent upon his brother, Clay Elmore, was arraigned this afternoon and pleaded not guilty. The date of his trial has not been set.

Tomorrow is the regular return day for summons and many attorneys will be present. Quite a number of cases will also be set for trial Tuesday.

Primary Case Venued.

Vincennes, October 18.—The test case of the new state primary law was today venued to Gibson county. In this case, filed by George W. Loft, it is sought to have the law declared unconstitutional.

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR CORN EXHIBIT

Victor N. Fetting, President of Merchants' Association, Makes the Appointments.

SHOW TO BE HELD NOVEMBER

Display Promises to Be One of the Largest Ever Shown in Southern Indiana.

Victor N. Fetting, president of the Merchants' Association, today named the committee which will make final arrangements for the Corn Show to be held in this city the latter part of November. The exact date has not yet been decided upon and will be fixed by the general committee. The committee will meet in the directors' room of the Seymour National Bank Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Fetting said that the committee would elect its own chairman and make rules of government to be followed in the future.

The committee is as follows: T. S. Blish, J. E. Graham, N. Kaufman, W. L. Johnson, H. C. Johnson, J. H. Andrews, A. D. Cobb, O. E. Carter, L. C. Gifford, Charles Roeger and L. L. Bollinger. The appointment followed the action of the meeting Friday afternoon at the city building when it was practically decided to hold the Show and the president of the Merchants' Association was empowered to appoint the members who will take charge.

A. D. Cobb, the county agent, is attending a meeting of the county agents of the state and will not return here until next week. In the meantime, it is planned, the committee will complete many of the arrangements so that the work can be pushed with vigor immediately upon the return of Mr. Cobb, who has been active in planning for the proposed Show.

It is likely that the one of the plans proposed by the county agent providing for the districting of the county will be adopted. By this plan the county will be divided into districts or townships and prizes will be offered by several classes of corn in each division. Prizes will be offered for the best ear and the best ten ears of each white, yellow and mixed. The winners in the districts will then be eligible to compete in the grand county contest for sweepstakes either in class or county. This plan, it is stated, is regarded as the most feasible for the local contest.

The farmers throughout the county are showing much interest in the proposed exhibit and scores have stated that they intend to exhibit. The yield and quality of corn this fall are exceptionally good and the agricultural agent points out that this is an excellent time to hold a county show.

The interest that is manifested this year in the growing of seed corn in this county, which is conceded to be more profitable than growing feed corn, will result in an unusually large exhibit, it is thought. Many of the farmers are selecting the seed with greater care than usual as they realize that without good seed it will be impossible to raise seed corn. In the recent township meetings many points pertaining to this were discussed by the county agent.

As soon as the committee adopts the plans to be followed in holding the corn show the work will begin in earnest. There remains about a month to complete arrangements and to advertise it throughout the county. As this is the first corn show ever held in Seymour the local merchants desire that it be a success in every way and are giving it their support.

THIEVES TAKE $15,000 IN STAMPS AT EVANSVILLE

Cunning Cracksmen Blow Safe In Revenue Collectors Office and Escape with "War" Stamps.

By United Press. Evansville, Ind., Oct. 18.—Cunning burglars stole emergency "war" stamps to the value of $15,000 from a safe in the office of Deputy Foley, collector of internal revenue, in the federal building last night. The robbery was discovered to-day.

A wide cut in the sheet metal around the combination, a jimmy, brace, nippers and drills left lying on a desk showed how the work was done. The steel money safe was not tampered with.

The thieves did not take any cigar or beer stamps that were in the safe. They apparently knew that the government keeps a record of these stamps. No record is kept of the sale of "war" stamps. The thieves took a string off of a bundle of ordinary stamps to tie up the bundle, but did not break the seal.

To escape it was necessary for the thieves to cross the lighted downtown section.

FOREMAN OF JURY SLEEPS DURING OPENING ADDRESS

Attorney for Government in New Haven Directors' Case Repeats Assertions.

By United Press. New York, October 18.—With the New Haven directors' trial only a few days old Stephen D. Hirschman, foreman of the jury, slept for four minutes today while Government Attorney Batts was outlining the details involved in the Metropolitan Steamship Company deal. After waking up Hirschman, Batts repeated what the sleeping foreman had lost.

"The government is not against the combination of railroads, steamship lines or other industries, if the combinations are formed according to law," was Batts' opening shot.

DANIELS CONFIDENT OF CONGRESS' APPROVAL

Says "Little Navy" Members Have Not Yet Filed Protests to Administration Plan.

By United Press. Washington, October 18.—Confident that Congress will "substantially approve" the preparedness program of the navy was expressed today by Secretary Daniels. He said he had not received any protest against the protests from any of the "little navy" congressmen.

That opposition would be encountered from the extreme pacifists in congress, Daniels admitted, was probable. He declared, however, "the reasonable five-year program would commend in itself to many former 'little navy' congressmen."

DIPLOMATS HOLD FINAL SESSION

Discussion of Probable Ambassador to Mexico Overshadows Recognition Plan.

H. P. FLETCHER MAY BE CHOICE

Case of Huerta Practically Disposed of by Reiteration of Government's Purpose.

By United Press. Washington, October 18.—Discussion of the probable fate of General Huerta and the probable name of the United States ambassador to Mexico overshadowed the actual recognition plan for Mexico as the Pan-American conference held its final session this afternoon.

Henry P. Fletcher, of Chambersburg, Pa., was today considered a likely choice as ambassador to Mexico. He is now ambassador to Chile and has been in the diplomatic service since 1902.

The case of Huerta was practically disposed of by the reiteration of the government purpose to hold him until charges made against him in this country are disposed of.

BULGARIANS CUT RAILWAY AND HOLD VANTAGE POINT

Salonika Dispatches Say Bulgars Have Seized Vrania, Blocking Allies' Access to Nish.

By United Press. London, Oct. 18.—That the Bulgarians have cut the Nish-Salonika railway at Vrania was said in Salonika dispatches today to be insistently reported there. Vrania, a Serbian town, is about eighty miles northeast of Strumnitza, the Bulgarian stronghold, which capture by Serbo-Franco British forces is announced in dispatches from Salonika today. It is forty miles due south of Nish, and ten miles west of the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier.

If the Bulgarians have taken this, they must have done so by marching straight across the border to the north of the point where their territory was invaded, and assuming that they can hold their position, the Allies' access to Nish is blocked, if the report is correct.

ITALY ARRANGES TO BORROW 25 MILLION IN THE U. S.

Arrangements Made To-day For Raising This Sum, The Money To Remain in This Country.

By United Press. New York, Oct. 18.—Closely following the success in the floating of the allied loan, arrangements were made to-day for a 25 million dollar loan to the Italian government, to be raised in this country. As in the big Anglo-France loan, the money secured by the Italian credit will remain in this country for the purchases of supplies. One year notes, with interest at 6 per cent, and in denominations of $100, $1,000 and $5,000 will be used by the new syndicate.

QUEST OF THE RED FLOWER

Romance of Two Americans
Among Mexican Bandits.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The handsome young captain of the little band of Mexican revolutionists stared insolently across the table at his captive.

Ned Hallett, the captive, glared angrily back at Fernando Perez.

"You will pay dearly for attacking the mine and dispersing my men," said the American savagely.

Captain Perez smiled.

"Americanos must stay at home if they wish to avoid trouble," he purred.

The young mine owner controlled his anger and brought himself to discuss terms with Captain Perez.

"I suppose it is a matter of money," he sneered. "How much will buy my release from your ruffianly band?"

Captain Perez twisted the ends of his silky black mustache and regarded the broad shouldered prisoner with thoughtful black eyes.

Money was a very desirable thing. He had never possessed enough of the commodity to satisfy his tastes. After this war was over the country would be too hot to hold him. Paris would be his choice, and it took money to live in Paris. He did not want to go to Paris alone either. Still he might be able to use the Americano in two ways. He would waive the money question now.

He could kill the young mine owner afterward, and there would be money enough derived from those very valuable diamonds in Hallett's ring and scarfpin.

"How much?" repeated Hallett.

Captain Perez waved his slim brown hand.

"It is not a question of money, señor," he lied quietly. "If you will do me a service you will earn your freedom."

"What is it you want?"

"Bring me the Red Flower."

"The Red Flower?" repeated Hallett vaguely. "I'm sure I don't know what you mean."

"There is a Red Flower in the Zamora valley that I desire to wear next to my heart," said Perez, his dark face flushing warmly and his black eyes sparkling with pleasure. "I offer you your freedom in exchange for the Red Flower, er, señor."

"But why don't you go and get it yourself?" questioned Hallett.

Perez regarded his questioner from under level black brows. "I cannot go, and my men would not be successful in the quest. Go, señor, and when you return with the Red Flower your freedom will be your reward."

"Shall I go alone?" asked Hallett.

"Yes. To all outward appearances you will be quite free from espionage, but remember, señor, my wolves will be on your trail. If you are faithless to the trust I am imposing on you you will die like a dog. Bring the Red Flower to me at sunset tomorrow and you go forth free and unharmed."

"What sort of a flower is it?" asked Hallett curiously. "How shall I recognize it? Is it a cactus flower?"

Captain Perez laughed bitterly.

"Si, señor; it is a cactus flower, beautiful as the morning, cruel as the thorns that beset it. You will not fail to recognize it. But, Señor Americano—and here the Mexican leaned across the table and hissed sharply—"dare not to wear the Red Flower when you find it. Hold it aloof; treasure it carefully. It is for me alone. I have watched it bud and blossom for me alone." He sank back in his chair and hung his head with sudden dejection.

"I will go," said Ned Hallett quietly.

Perez lifted his head and called sharply.

Two of his men, dressed in a ragged conglomeration of garments that included American made shirts, military trousers much the worse for wear, faded cavalry capes and broken visored caps, padded in on bare feet.

They saluted and eyed their leader with furtive glances.

Perez spoke rapidly in Spanish and, finding that Hallett understood the language, changed to the miserable patois of the district. Hallett picked out a familiar word here and there and gleaned enough to understand that he was to be followed to the hiding place of the Red Flower and if he failed to bring the desired blossom to Perez he was to be assassinated in cold blood.

He smiled bitterly as he awaited the completion of their plans. Unarmed he would stand little chance of coming out alive after gaining possession of the mysterious Red Flower of which Perez raved. He guessed that he was to be lured to some lonely spot and murdered.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Quien sabe?" he muttered as the two men appeared to start him on his journey.

A package of food was thrust into his hands, and he was started on his way by a prick from a machete which was afterward tossed toward him.

"Take it, Señor Americano," called one of his tormentors. "You will need it to cut the Red Flower!"

Rude laughter followed his going. He had picked up the machete because he knew that he would need it to cut his way through the undergrowth.

Perez had pointed out the way to the valley of the Zamora—it lay to the south and followed the muddy little river fringed with willows.

By nightfall Ned Hallett had reached the entrance to the tiny valley. He looked down on well tilled fields of cane and cotton, on red roofed adobe houses and barns and all the homely sights and sounds of farm life.

What place was this to which Perez had sent him in quest of the mysterious Red Flower?

He looked again and noted that the houses were closely shuttered, the cattle lingered disconsolately about the closed barns, the chickens had wandered unchecked among the fields and were devastating the crops, the place looked deserted.

He decided to wait until night had fallen before he investigated further in this valley of the Red Flower. He would sleep there and pluck the flower by daylight.

The night fell softly like a gray mantle over the valley. Stars pricked out in the deep blue of the sky and there was no sound save the distant flow of the little river, the murmuring discontent of the neglected cattle and the shrill cry of a night bird.

After Hallett had eaten sparingly he went hastily in search of a spring, for the peppery food had augmented his thirst. He followed a well defined trail down to the valley and presently found himself standing outside the principal door of the largest house. At his approach the denizens of the barnyard broke into a clamor of greeting.

While he hesitated on the doorstep the door was flung open, and the cold muzzle of a revolver was pressed against his temple.

"Quien es?" asked a girl's voice sharp with fear.

"Amigo," returned Ned Hallett quickly, for a weapon in the hands of a woman always inspired him with respect.

"A friend!" she gasped. "I wonder if it is true?"

"You speak English?" he asked eagerly. "Perhaps you are not Mexican?"

"Of course I am an American," returned the girl, peering down at him. "And you—you do not speak like a native."

"I am an American—owner of the El Monte mine—captured by a roving band of insurgents. I am earning my release by fulfilling a mission for Captain Perez of—"

"Perez? The little snake! Can I trust you?" she asked in an anguished tone.

"As you would yourself," returned Ned sincerely.

"I am all alone here," she announced. "Captain Perez and his band of scoundrels kidnaped me from my father's plantation and brought me here, where he left me in charge of some women who are related to him. I have imprisoned three of the women in a cellar of the house, and the fourth one has just eluded me and I know has gone to report my insubordination to Perez. I dare not go alone into this unfriendly country. So far I have protected myself and won my way with my guns. I am a dead shot at long range, and the women were cowards. Tell me, amigo," she cried piteously, "what am I to do?"

Hallett took her trembling hand in his, and she did not withdraw it, but with feminine inconsistency she still held the revolver against his temple.

"Cheer up," said Ned practically. "We will take horses and get away from here at once. Pack up some food, enough for a couple of days, and I will get the horses ready."

"Thank God for your help!" cried the girl brokenly, as she lowered the weapon and turned away. "But, Mr. Hallett, how about your mission for Captain Perez? Your life will be in danger if you fail to accomplish it."

Hallett laughed carelessly.

"I'll take a chance on that with a horse under me and a gun in my hand and some one to protect," he said grimly. "All he sent me for was some miserable red flower he was possessed after."

"Red Flower?" echoed the girl faintly. "Did you come here for the Red Flower?"

"Yes; he told me it was a cactus flower. Seems he wanted to wear it against his heart. Rather sentimental of the gallant captain," he ended sardonically.

"Don't jest," protested the girl. "Don't you understand, sir, that he meant me—he called me the Red Flower! You will know why he called me that when daylight comes and you see that my hair is red. I understand him now. He thought he could lure me out of the valley through the means of an American. Once out in the open he would shoot you and capture me. I cannot go with you, Mr. Hallett."

Ned Hallett swore roundly. "You must come," he said shortly. "Of course, now that I understand the situation you must know that my pact with Perez is ended. I will see that you get safely across the border, and I will notify your people of your safety. You can trust me, Miss."

"Alice Latham," she supplied; then she bent her head and looked closely at him in the semidarkness of the doorway. "I will trust you," she said quickly. "I will get ready while you find the horses. The two blacks are the strongest and the best for hard traveling. I will be ready in ten minutes. Take these pistols. There are more here and plenty of ammunition."

Fifteen minutes later they rode quietly out of the valley, both of them strongly armed and with food and water packed on Hallett's saddle. Before they left Alice let down the fence rails so that the neglected cattle could rove around and find food and water.

For several hours they rode along the river bank in silence, and it was not until Ned made the turn that would take them to the border of the states and thus made clear his intention to play false to Perez that the wolves of the Mexican captain were loosed.

They fired at Hallett from ambush and missed. His black horse, accustomed to guerrilla warfare, carried him into the thicket so quickly that he surprised the two spies of Perez. He shot one in the shoulder, and as the man sank to the ground the other one received a shot that disabled him.

Then the two Americans fled rapidly through the night toward the land of their birth. And when another midday sun glared down on the parched earth it found Alice Latham and Ned Hallett safe in the little Texas town of Speedwell, where they were sending a messenger to the Latham plantation with good news of her safety.

When Ned Hallett got his first good look at Alice Latham he drew a long breath and exclaimed:

"Now, I understand why Perez called you the Red Flower! I never knew a red haired girl could be so beautiful!" he added involuntarily.

Alice Latham laughed and shook back the beautiful red fleece of hair that framed her perfect face. Her red brown eyes held magic for Ned Hallett, and it is not strange that he determined to win and wear the Red Flower for his own.

"As you appear to have saved my girl's life, I rather think it belongs to you, Hallett," was Mr. Latham's decision some months later when Ned put the momentous question to him.

So Ned wore the Red Flower after all, and Captain Perez went to Paris alone.

Hold it aloof; treasure it carefully. It is for me alone. I have watched it bud and blossom for me alone." He sank back in his chair and hung his head with sudden dejection.

"I will go," said Ned Hallett quietly.

Perez lifted his head and called sharply.

Two of his men, dressed in a ragged conglomeration of garments that included American made shirts, military trousers much the worse for wear, faded cavalry capes and broken visored caps, padded in on bare feet.

They saluted and eyed their leader with furtive glances.

ADMIT CIVIL WAR IN MOSCOW

Ukase Proclaims "State of War" Exists.

CAUSED BY LABOR TROUBLE

Rioting in City District Are Said Not to Be of a Political Nature, but Due to Strikes—Czar Hesitated to Decide, Fearing Duma.

London, Oct. 18.—A Petrograd dispatch announces that an imperial ukase has been issued, proclaiming "a state of war" in Moscow and the Moscow district.
Disorders of considerable proportion have occurred in Moscow during the past few months. These have been chiefly attributed in advices from Russia to labor troubles, largely due to many persons having been thrown out of work by strikes, and are declared not to have been of a political nature.

Later reports of rioting in Moscow have come through Germany, a news agency dispatch telling of the building of barricades in the city streets and of twenty-five policemen and eight higher officials being wounded and three civilians killed and twelve wounded, according to this account.

Mail advices that reached here from Russia last month described the June riots, in which several persons were injured and damage estimated at nearly $20,000,000 was done to property as probably due to the growth in Moscow during the fifteen years of a hand to mouth urban population which had come in from the villages. This element was described as having lost the steady influence of village life without acquiring urban traditions.
The czar recently dissolved the Duma because the autocracy was about to overthrow leading bureaucrats and make the czar a constitutional monarch, with little more power than the historic George of England. The czar wavered for weeks as to whether he should grant demands and remove the grafters, but apparently realized that any demands he might grant only would lead to larger requests for the removal of certain politicians.

Only the popular determination to overthrow the Germans, it was stated, overcame the desire for a widespread revolt and this hate for the Teutonic enemies temporarily relieved the crisis in internal affairs.

INDIANAPOLIS SPEND LARGE SUM ON GOLF

Season About to Close has Been one of Great Enthusiasm—Three City Courses.

(By Dan L. Beebe, United Press Staff Correspondent.)
Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 18.—Indianapolis spends approximately $120,040 a year on golf—and that figure is conservative.

Nearly one million dollars worth of real estate in and about Indianapolis is devoted to golf. A conservative estimate placed it at $989,000.

The city of Indianapolis, as a corporation, has approximately $909,000 invested in golf. It spends annually, including interest on real estate at 6 per cent, about $63,423 that is if golfers may whack the gutta percha ball on public courses. The golfers returned to the city in 1914 $3,481.75 in dues and locker fees.

The season about to close has been the most enthusiastic ever experienced by Indianapolis, and there are many in this city—as elsewhere—who predict that golf will supplant baseball as the national game. In that event, Indianapolis is prepared for the future, and will be able to accommodate its golfers for years to come with its present golf facilities somewhat amplified.

At present about 1,370 men and women play more or less regularly in Indianapolis. Of these about 870 play on the three city courses. The best figures obtainable show that the city of Indianapolis pays out about $72 annually for each of the golfers playing on the city courses.

In fairness to the management of the three city golf courses it must be explained here that this average per player would be considerably reduced if the interest on the land composing the Highland course to that club at a low figure, but since the Highland players are not playing on a public course, the 200 players there can not be added in to reduce the cost per player. The rent paid by Highland is subtracted however, from the total interest paid by the city on real estate for golf purposes.

All figures appearing in this article and those used as a basis for estimates have been passed on by a golfer whose position as a club official insures his ability to judge them properly. Estimates on real estate were obtained from real estate dealers, and then to insure conservatism, thousands of dollars were lopped off.

In this connection it is interesting to recall that certain Indianapolis writers have repeatedly protested that all city courses should be absolutely free to the public. Their idea was that if a course is owned by the city it should be open to the rich and poor alike. They say that the $8 fee at Riverside and the $5 fee at Irvington work an injustice on certain poorer people who might play golf if the fees were not there.

Those taking the other side of the argument reply that if the city is paying in the neighborhood of $70 annually for each man who plays golf, it is only fair that these individuals should repay a fee in order that the total cost shall not be paid by tax payers who will never do more than at a golf course.

Without taking sides, it is proper to call attention to the approximate figures: Indianapolis spends annually $63,423 for about 870 players. They return $3,481. The rest is paid by the park board from funds raised through general taxation. Of the $3,481, only about $2,300 results from the much discussed dues. Or, in the other figures the city pays out about $70 per golfer and the golfer returns $8 if he plays at Riverside and $5 if he plays at Irvington.

The individual golfer in Indianapolis spends a goodly sum during a season for golf aside from his dues. There are balls, caddies, clubs and transportation to be had, to say nothing of clothing and bets. One golfer said his expenses aside from his dues probably were $50 a year, and this would be a conservative average for all golfers, he said.

One professional on a local course said his average monthly sale on balls for seven months probably amounted to $500 and that golfers on his course probably spent in a season $2,500 for clubs, caddies and etc.

Figures cannot deal with such intangible things as health and joy resulting from golf, nor with the fact that Indianapolis probably received valuable advertising from its golf courses. It is often said that in the Riverside 18-hole course, Indianapolis has one that cannot be duplicated among public courses in this section of the country.

MISS MOLLIE'S MISTAKE

By GEORGE MUNSON.

The dashing Miss Wheeler, private secretary to President Brown, of the Lighting Corporation, had left to marry a millionaire. And little Mollie Raymond had been selected, out of a hundred and nine stenographers, to fill her place!

The dashing Miss Wheeler, with her fine airs and Paris gowns, had long been the envy of the stenographers' department.

However, Miss Wheeler must fade into obscurity, for this concerns little Mollie Raymond, of Hopeville, and her fiancé, George.

George was one of those men who are known solely by their Christian names. That is sufficient characterization of George. He was insignificant, yellow-haired, and loved Mollie devotedly. He was earning twenty-five dollars a week and was waiting to be raised to thirty before claiming the fulfillment of Mollie's promise.

It was the dashing Miss Wheeler who had first raised doubts in Mollie's mind as to the eligibility of George.

Mollie loved George sincerely, but she had been beginning to think hard since Miss Wheeler's engagement was announced. Were love and George worth a possible Hodgkins without love? And, once the president's secretary, and a visitor at Cowleigh, would not another Hodgkins loom up before her as with Miss Wheeler? If only she had clothes like the dashing Miss Wheeler!

It was this, and not her rise in the world, that made her cold to George when they next met.

It was a miserable evening. They seemed to drift further apart. Finally George blurted out:

"I know what's the matter, Mollie. Your head's been turned by that Miss Wheeler you told me about, and you don't care for me any more."

"Don't be foolish, George," answered Mollie, tartly. "I hardly ever said a word to Miss Wheeler. If you can't trust me, just because I'm getting more money than you—"

Tears followed. They led to anger. In the end Mollie flung George's ring on the table, and George put on his hat—yes, inside the room—and stalked away.

Days followed. George had neither written nor called. And Mollie, though she still loved George, began to think of him as someone whom she had known long ago—before she took the place of the dashing Miss Wheeler.

"When my new dress comes Mr. Brown will feel quite, quite differently toward me," thought Mollie.

On the evening before she planned to emerge, like a butterfly, out of the drab cocoon of her personality, Mr. Brown was not quite so gruff. Mollie thought he was softening. She was quite happy when he actually bade her good-night.

He went into Mr. Cyrus' room adjacent. The door stood open. Mollie, overhearing her hat, could not avoid overhearing the conversation that ensued.

"That's a nice, sensible little girl you picked out for me, Cyrus," said Mr. Brown. "You hit my taste to a nicety."

"I'm very glad to hear you say that, sir," replied Mr. Cyrus, modestly. "Cyrus, you are a wonder," said Mr. Brown. "A nice, quiet, sensible little girl, not a gay butterfly like Miss Wheeler. Lord, what a lot of trouble that woman gave me with her dress and airs. Unfortunately, she managed to get an introduction to Mrs. Brown through an acquaintance, so of course she had me on toast."

"It's a good thing she didn't last, sir," said Cyrus.

"Quite so. Well, as I told you, I meant to get quite a different type of woman for my next adventure. A quiet, modest little country girl, who knew how to dress sensibly, instead of turning my office into a ball-room or a box at the opera house, like that—that creature that got poor Hodgkins."

"I think I got her, sir," said Mr. Cyrus.

"You followed my instructions absolutely. 'Cyrus,' I said to you, 'I want a quiet, modest, plainly dressed little girl next time. And get me a plain, homely one, who isn't likely to have any admirers, and won't get married and leave me in the lurch.' And by the Lord, you found her!"

Poor Mollie, stung to the quick, sank into her chair and burst into an agony of silent weeping. Fortunately for her self-respect, neither Mr. Brown nor Mr. Cyrus came through the room.

After a while a very different Mollie went home. She cried all the way up in the elevator. In her room lay a package from the dressmaker. Mollie opened it and flung the contents across the room.

She would resign at once. She would humble Brown into the dust. She would—stay! What was it he had said? "A plain, homely one, who isn't likely to have any admirers, and won't get married and leave me in the lurch!"

Mollie crept to the mirror. The face that looked into her own was not that of a beauty. But it was that of a very simple, honest little woman who had come to understand herself at last.

Revenge! "Who won't get married and leave me in the lurch!" Mollie went to her desk and began writing a letter. The opening words were:

"My dearest, darling George. Forgive me!"

Tailored Suits

This is the month when milady will give much thought to the question of choosing a "tailored suit."

And more than ever will she be interested in the advertising in The Republican.

That advertising becomes to her very important news.

It tells her about colors and cloths and styles—tells her whether skirts are to be wide or narrow—and above all else gives her an idea of price and values.

When she comes to make her important purchase, the woman who has read the advertising will do better than her sister who did not post herself.

THE DREAMER.
THE gypsies passed her little gate—
She stopped her wheel to see
A brown faced pair who walked the road
Free as the wind is free;
And suddenly her tiny room
A prison seemed to be.

HER shining plates against the walls,
Her sunlit sanded floor,
The brass bound wedding chest that held
Her linen's snowy store,
The very wheel whose running died
Seemed only claims she bore.

SHE watched the foot free gypsies pass;
She never knew or guessed
The wishful dream that drew them close—
The longing in each breast,
To some day know a home like hers
Wherein their hearts might rest.

A PUBLIC LYNCHING.

It hardly seems possible that in this day of enlightenment and civilization a public lynching could take place in a neighboring state. But that is what is reported from Murphysboro, Ill. A negro was hanged in the public square in the presence of three thousand men, women and children. Two thousand of the spectators were sworn in as deputies and the others climbed to housetops so they might not miss any of the horrible details. Even children were permitted to witness the hanging. The impressions they received will never be blotted from their memory.

Somebody, some set of officials are responsible for this public hanging. It took place despite the protests of hundreds of people filed in the name of the Anti-Capital Punishment Society of America. The public exhibition was doubtless arranged as an "example." But the results will fail absolutely. Such a spectacle cannot but have an effect upon a community. Arguments are advanced in favor and against capital punishment, but the public is almost unanimously in favor of such punishment being meted out behind closed doors if it is deemed advisable to administer it at all.

A VALUABLE CITIZEN.

It is with deep regret that we record the death of Joel H. Matlock, citizen, banker and business man. His life was one of achievements. While successful in business he was a man among men and as such was always ready to extend a helping hand to those in need and distress. He was a devout churchman and carried his religious convictions into his everyday dealings. He was deeply interested in his home life and the members of his family have the sincerest sympathy of his friends and acquaintances. The death of Mr. Matlock removes a valuable citizen, but his character is his monument, more enduring than that made by human hands and possible only through the guidance of the Architect of the Universe.

The shops of the local merchants are crowded with new, up-to-date goods, the kind that are admired by the careful buyer. The dealers and the manufacturers are back of everything they sell, thus giving the buyer a double guarantee. The advertisement of a merchant is a public announcement that he has confidence in his goods and the average buyer is not apt to buy supplies in which the dealer does not have confidence. In other words the advertisements in the daily newspaper guarantee the protection desired.

The residents of Jackson county are justly proud of the county. The best way to show it is to get behind the Corn Show and boost it to success.

CHARGED WITH KILLING WIFE

Tells the Court That He Discovered
Body After Recovering From Lapse of Memory.

By United Press.

Como, Italy, October 18—Trembling and at the point of collapse, Porter Charlton today told the court which is trying him for his wife's murder how he met and married his victim, of their life together and the events which led up to the killing in the honeymoon villa on Lake Como. The young American told of his discovery that he had slain his wife during an interval when his mind was a blank, of the manner in which he sank the body in Lake Como and finally of his flight.

The woman, Mary Scott Castle, already divorced and considerably older than himself, was married to him in 1909, he said. His love for her, he declared, was so intense that it filled his entire life.

Wegan Funeral Held.

The funeral of Henry Wegan, 67, who died suddenly early Saturday morning, was held at 11 o'clock today from his late home, at Wegan, Brownstown township. The remains were interred at the Wegan cemetery.

Mr. Wegan had gone into the kitchen and was attacked with heart trouble while standing near a stove. Mrs. Wegan is an invalid and was unable to call help. The body was found some time later by neighbors who called. He was a well known and prosperous farmer and highly respected. He is survived by his widow.

APPROACHING WEDDING.

The following is taken from The Detroit, published at Detroit, Mich., of the Saturday issue:

The wedding ceremony uniting Miss Marie Louise Moran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Moran, with Mr. Julius Christian Peter, will take place at half after four o'clock Thursday, October 21. Rev. Fr. William Doran, S. J. President of the University of Detroit, will officiate. The wedding as well as the reception which will follow, will be at the home, 415 Jefferson avenue. The bride will be attended by Miss Frances Wight, of New York, as maid of honor, and little Viola Hammond, a niece, will be the flower girl. Mr. William F. Peter, of Chicago, will be his brother's best man. The ushers will be Mr. Herbert Barbour and Mr. Philip North Wright. Miss Bredin gave a dinner last Saturday evening at the Country Club for Miss Moran and Mr. Peter. Mr. Herbert Barbour will give a dinner tonight for the wedding party.

SCHNEIDER-AHLBRAND.

A pretty wedding took place at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Schneider, two miles north of Jonesville, when their daughter, Miss Clara Marie, became the bride of Mr. John Ahlbrand, also of Jonesville. The impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Kaiser, pastor of the German Lutheran church at Jonesville. Sixty relatives and friends were invited guests. The wedding march was played by Prof. Groose.

The bride wore a gown of white lace over white silk. Her veil was caught with smilax and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses. Miss Louise Ahlbrand, of Seymour, was bridesmaid and wore pink silk with an over dress of lace. Mr. Will Evans, of Ohio, was best man. After congratulations a wedding dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Ahlbrand will live five miles east of Columbus.

WILSON-RUCKER.

A pretty, but quiet, wedding occurred Saturday evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. N. C. Rucker, when their daughter, Miss Anna, became the bride of H. H. Wilson. In the presence of only the immediate relatives Rev. E. C. Hollman, of Lynn, Ind., performed the impressive ceremony. The bride is a graduate of the Shields High School and has been a successful teacher in the county schools, her last position being in the Vallonia high school. Mr. Wilson was formerly from Uniontown and has a position as traveling salesman. They left this morning for Shelbyville, where they will be at home for the present. They have the best wishes of their many friends.

BALL-BOWMAN.

Clarence Ball and Miss Fern Bowman were married Saturday evening in their newly furnished home in Brownstown by the Rev. T. J. Due, pastor of the Christian church, in the presence of a company of relatives and a few close friends. Mrs. Ball has often visited in Seymour and was well known here. Mr. Ball is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Ball and one of the firm of the Ball Planing Mill.

ENTERTAINED

Miss Anna Holland Carter delightfully entertained several of her girl friends at twelve o'clock dinner Sunday, at her home on West Fourth street, in honor of Miss Esther Prall, who will leave in a few days for Indianapolis, where she will make her future home with her grandmother and brother. Those present were: Miss Esther Prall, Margaret Loertz, Ruth Stanfield and Anna Holland Carter.

JECKEL-JOHNSON.

William Jeckel and Miss Maude Johnson were quietly married Saturday afternoon at the home of the bride in Brownstown by Rev. T. J. Due, pastor of the Christian church. They will reside in Brownstown. Mrs. Jeckel is a sister of Mrs. Mack Stevens, of this city.

DINNER PARTY.

Mrs. John Bergseeker entertained a company of friends Sunday at her home in Jonesville, in honor of her guests, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Vonstrohe, of Kansas City, Mo. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dean Bottorff and family, of Columbus, and Mr. and Mrs. William Wente and family, of Indianapolis.

AUTO PARTY.

Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Mitchell, of Salem, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam H. Turmail and son, of Vallonia, composed an auto party here Sunday afternoon and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ray R. Keach and family.

FAMILY DINNER.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Moritz entertained a number of relatives at dinner Sunday at their home on East Fifth street. Quite a number of the relatives were present and spent a delightful day.

BIRTHDAY DINNER.

Mrs. George Schwein, of Brownstown, was hostess Sunday to about fifty friends and relatives to a birthday dinner, in honor of her husband, George Schwein. The guests presented him with a handsome rocking chair. The day was thoroughly enjoyed and the hostess was congratulated upon the elegant dinner which she prepared.

PARK MISSION CELEBRATES
SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Building Fund Has Been Started and Members Hope to Erect Small Chapel Soon.

The Park Baptist Mission celebrated its second anniversary Sunday afternoon. The Mission was organized two years ago as an outgrowth of the work of the Baptist Home Department Class No. 1 which meets in the northeast part of the city. At that time they occupied one room in a residence, now they have two rooms on North Blish street and these are crowded to their capacity. A building fund was started last January which now amounts to $97.76 and the Mission is looking for a location on which a small chapel can be erected to care for their growing work.

The program Sunday consisted of recitations, songs by the different departments of the school and an address by Rev. Charles L. Graham, pastor. The Sunday School has an average attendance between fifty and sixty. Yesterday there were eighty-seven present and a collection of $2.76 was taken which will be applied on the building fund. The primary class has a birthday bank in which the money is being accumulated to pay for small chairs for the primary class. The officers of the school are as follows: Superintendent, Voss Cox; Asst. Supt., Mrs. Joseph Harsh; Secretary, Edna Gossett; Treasurer, Joseph Harsh; Adult Bible Class Teacher, Mrs. Erwin Culver; Girls Intermediate Class Teacher, Madge Linke; Boys Intermediate Class Teacher, Wm. DeMunbrum; Primary Teacher, Dorothy Monroe.

Building Committee: Voss Cox, Chairman; Joseph Harsh, Robert Blair, Thomas Hunt, Mrs. Joseph Harsh, Mrs. Erwin Culver, Dorothy Monroe.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM HEARD
AT GERMAN M. E. SUNDAY SCHOOL

Offerings From the Farm Received and Will be Distributed by Committee.

The efforts of the German M. E. Sunday School to have a successful Rally Day were crowned with success. The attendance was large. The faces of many former pupils of the school were seen as well as some new faces. The indefatigable superintendent, Mr. George A. Winkenhof, assisted by an able committee, prepared an excellent program which the school rendered with credit to itself. The decorations consisted of fall foliage which was massed at various points so as to make the best display. The classes had been instructed to arrange for an offering from field and farm and in consequence there were pumpkins, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, apples, canned fruits, jellies, as well as money. A committee has been appointed to see to the distribution of the donations.

First M. E. Rally Day.

Rally Day was successfully observed at the First M. E. Sunday School yesterday. The attendance was about 425 and a special program of songs and recitations was given.

Junior Baptist Choir.

The Junior choir of the First Baptist church will meet at the church Tuesday afternoon, immediately after school.

SOLICITING FUNDS FOR TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

Field Representatives Spoke at Various Churches Sunday in Behalf of Movement.

Three representatives of the Peoples' Tuberculosis Sanatorium Association are in the city soliciting funds for the erection of a large tuberculosis hospital in the state. Mr. William J. Evans, secretary, Mr. G. A. Reinhardt and Mr. Ed Reinhardt, field representatives, spoke at the various churches in the city yesterday morning and evening in the interest of their work.

The hospital which they plan is intended to accommodate 1,000 patients in the open air pavilions, which will be provided. Three locations are under consideration, one near Connersville, another near Madison and another near Indianapolis. There are now 3500 cases of tuberculosis in Indiana. Last year there were over 5,000 deaths from the disease, 3,400 new cases and 2,800 orphans whose parents died from the disease. During the period of four years more than eight times as many deaths occur in this county from tuberculosis as were killed in battle during the four years of Civil War. Any measures which will help eradicate the disease will receive the hearty approval of the citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Everhart and son will leave Tuesday for their home in Springfield, O., after an extended visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Everhart.

WHY YOU SHOULD WEAR DR. REED'S Cushion Shoes

Comfort Your feet rest upon a flexible cushion which conforms to and fills every curve of your feet, and distributes the weight of your body evenly the full length and width of the bottoms of your feet, relieving the extreme pressure on your heel, ankle and toe joints, and prevents any jar from walking.

Fit Dr. Reed shoes are scientifically constructed, the foot conforming cushion holds your feet as in a mold, relieving callouses, corns, bunions and the hot burning sensation of your feet caused by the ordinary hard-soled shoes.

Health The soft fibre insole holds your feet in place and distributes the weight of your body evenly from heel to toe, and permits a free circulation of your blood through the bottoms of your feet, relieves excessive perspiration and restores them to a natural, healthy condition. The fibre insole is an absolute non-conductor of heat and cold and does not allow the dampness to penetrate through the soles, preventing rheumatism, pneumonia and other diseases caused by your feet not being sufficiently protected.

Every man who wears them is a walking advertisement. We carry three lasts, all widths and sizes, at $5.00 the pair. We are the sole agents in Jackson County.

A Soldier Who Feared Reptiles.

Lord Wolseley, familiar with the carnage of the battlefield, was yet so sensitive that he could not pass a butcher's shop without horror, and in his "Story of a Soldier's Life," in which he confesses the weakness, he also relates an occasion when he beat an undignified retreat owing to a loathing horror of reptiles which he could never overcome.

He was refreshing himself after a dusty march in India by bathing in one of the shady "tanks" provided by the charitable for the wayfarer when a yellow snake put his head up over the surface of the water close to his face and shook his tongue. He knew the snake to be harmless, but his terror was so great that he struck out for the side of the tank as though "pursued by a whole zoological garden full of hostile and man devouring beasts and reptiles." To the end of his life he never overcame this horror of reptiles and would, he recorded, "fly even from the harmless toad."

"Ah, Miss Joise," said the caller, "I remember meeting you when you were six years old! That was twelve years ago, and I was a young man of twenty-one and a candidate for office. Yes, I remember the incident well, for I kissed you, and your papa voted for me."

"Are you a candidate for office this year?" she coyly inquired. "Because papa is still voting."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

WORTH WHILE.

It is easy enough to be pleasant When life flows by like a song. But the man worth while is one who will smile When everything goes dead wrong. For the test of the heart is trouble, And it always comes with the years, And the smile that is worth the praises of earth Is the smile that shines through tears.

It is easy to be prudent When nothing tempts you to stray, When without or within no voice of sin Is luring your soul away, But it's only a negative virtue Until it is tried by fire, And the life that is worth the honor of earth Is the one that resists desire.

By the cynic, the sad, the fallen, Who had no strength for the strife, The world's highway is cumbered today. They make up the sum of life. But the virtue that conquers passion And the sorrow that hides a smile, It is these that are worth the homage on earth For we find them but once in awhile. —Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

"WERE I A BUD."

WERE I a bud that fain would bloom, Unto her cheeks I'd trace my way, And learn the beauty of the day. While night was hushed in solemn gloom.

Were I a star I'd bend me low, Until from out her eyes of blue I caught the sparkle of the dew And found the light I did not know.

Ah, were I love, I'd long to be Within the depths of her dear heart; And by the throbs it did impart I'd learn life's great immensity! —Roscoe Gilmore Stott.

TWO ENGAGEMENT RINGS

Delivered at White House; Not Known Who Second Is For.

Washington, Oct. 18.—President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt disappeared two large congregations when they failed to appear at either the Central Presbyterian church or St. Margaret's Episcopal, in which Mr. Galt recently has taken a pew.

An interesting bit of gossip has it that the ring that the president purchased in New York ten days ago, was not the engagement ring after all. The real one is said to have arrived at the White House just a week ago from New York and was accompanied by another engagement ring of a different style.

These rings are said to have been ordered by Colonel House and Dr. Grayson from a prominent New York jeweler. They selected both stones and settings. But who the second ring was for cannot be discovered. Dr. Grayson has been out of town for several days.

PAIR DENIED NEW TRIAL

Were Found Guilty in Panama Conspiracy Case.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 18.—David J. Simpson and Dennis K. Bullens, convicted on a charge of conspiring to furnish steel of inferior quality for use in the locks and gates of the Panama canal, were denied a new trial in the United States district court.

The court ordered that the verdict of the jury stand. Simpson and Bullens together with Samuel M. Wetmore, superintendent of the Carbon Steel company, were tried in the federal court here at the same time. Wetmore was acquitted. Sentence has not been imposed on the other two.

BULGARS TAKE NISH RAILWAY

Force Passage of Frontier Mountains.

TEUTONS NOW OCCUPY AVALA

Throw the Serbians Across the Ralja River, Breaking Through Their Strongest Defense—10,000 Russian Prisoners Near Greteckau.

Athens (via London), Oct. 18.—Raptisms of fire were given the French troops in Macedonia when they were attacked by 40,000 Bulgarians near the railway bridge at Hadovo Vilandovo. The fighting continues.

London, Oct. 18.—The Germans and Austrians have gained complete possession of the strongly fortified heights south of Belgrade and have occupied Avala, a town on the Orient railway, eight miles south of the Austrian frontier.

It has remained, however, for the Bulgarian forces to effect the most strategic important advance of the last twenty-four hours. They have forced a passage of the frontier mountains between Zaitcar and Kniazevac at a point about thirty miles northeast of Nish, have descended into the Timok valley and cut the Nish-Danube railway and have ascended the sides of the Glogovika mountain, six miles farther west, capturing the crest.

The position of Glogovika is of importance because it commands the railway which runs from Zaitcar almost due west to the Orient railway at Paracin. From the crest of the mountain to the railway is about eight miles. The line of communications to Zaitcar from Nish, has been cut from the Timok valley and there remains only the Zaitcar-Paracin railway, over which the very considerable Serbian garrison at Zaitcar can escape.

Southwest of Semendria the troops under General von Gallwitz have thrown the Serbians across the Ralja river, thus breaking through one of their strongest lines of defense in this region.

The German war office issued the following statement respecting operations in Russia:

"The Russians were driven back as far as Misse. North and northeast of Greteckau we took five officers and over ten thousand men. Strong Russian attacks before Dvinsk were repulsed. We took four officers and 440 men. The army group under General von Linsingen threw the Russians over the Styx."

The French war office statement says:

"In Artols we seized a strong barricade to the southeast of Neuville St. Vaast and maintained ourselves there after having repulsed two counter attacks."

"In the sector of Lihons there was a violent bombardment on both sides. In Lorraine we again captured one hundred metres of trenches to the north of Reillon, in the course of stubborn combats fought at close quarters. During the night of the sixteenth our aviators bombarded the German army provision post of Maisieres in the Azoudange and the railroad station at Avricourt."

RUSSIA NEEDS MUNITIONS

Japan Exerting Every Effort to Increase the Supply.

Tokio, Oct. 18.—Munitions — not men for Russia—that is the great need of the entente allies, say Japanese officials. The authorities have repeatedly denied reports that Russia has asked for troops and that Japan will send troops. They are concentrating their efforts on the big problem of increasing the output of munitions for Russia.

The decision to enlarge government arsenals and even establish special factories pleases the military circles of Japan, who see in this an opportunity not only to help Russia and hasten the end of the war, but to create the means of increasing their own permanent production.

AUTOISTS WHO KILLED FARMER SURRENDER

One, Prostrate With Grief, Tells His Wife.

Logansport, Ind., Oct. 18.—After Richard Hart of Rochester broke under the remorse of keeping the secret and told his wife, the authorities at Rochester learned that Frank Stinson, a race driver and owner of a local garage, drove the automobile which killed Leopold Zanger on the Michigan road three miles north of Logansport.

The other men in the car, all from Rochester, were Roy Shanks, manager of the K. G. theater; Clarence Willard, Thomas Black, Thomas Hoover and Deputy Sheriff William Morris. The men, upon advice of attorneys, came to Logansport and admitted their car killed the farmer, who was walking along the road.

On an affidavit filed by Andrew Zanger, brother of the victim, all the men were bound over to circuit court. Stinson's bond is $1,000 and the others are under bond of $500 each.

It is said that the men, when they heard that Zanger had died, entered into an agreement not to tell, but Hart became ill and told his wife, who at once consulted a lawyer. Deputy Sheriff Morris has been on duty in Fulton county for years.

Richard Hart is prostrated at Rochester as a result of the tragedy. Morris, the deputy sheriff, complied with his obligation of secrecy under unusual difficulties. Authorities from Logansport went to Rochester several times to look for the culprits and Morris helped them in their search, seeming anxious to find the guilty ones.

ITALY PLANS TO CO-OPERATE

Will Support the Allies in Dealing With the Balkan Situation.

Rome, Oct. 18.—The foreign office has authorized your correspondent to say that Italy will co-operate with the allies in dealing with the Balkan situation. The exact day of active Italian support, as well as the direction which such support will take, are withheld for the present for military reasons. It is expected, however, that Italian troops will not be sent to Serbia or Montenegro, but elsewhere. Their destination may therefore be the Dardanelles, or the western front in France.

Your correspondent at the same time was authorized to deny the report of a disagreement between Italy and the other allies regarding the Balkans. A declaration of war by Italy against Bulgaria is imminent.

Fire Wagons For Terre Haute.

CARRANZA IS WELCOMED HOME

Showered With Roses as He Enters City.

SPEAKS TO THE PEOPLE

Declares That Villa Will Soon Be Driven From Country and Peace Restored—Leaves For Torreon, Villa's Headquarters.

Saltillo, Mexico, Oct. 18.—In his triumphal journey through territory conquered in northern Mexico, General Venustiano Carranza reached Saltillo, Coahuila, his home city, where he was tendered an emotional and picturesque welcome.

Both Carranza and Obregon, who came up with the first chief from Tampico, were cheered loudly by crowds in the streets, showered with roses by girls and hailed as the pacificators of Mexico.

After Obregon's invitation the Constitutional leader spoke briefly to the people. He thanked his townsmen for the support they had given his cause and for the reception given on his return. Later he thanked his officers who crowded about him and assured them of his belief, that Villa with his army demoralized and the public opinion of the United States arrayed solid against him, soon would be driven from Mexico.

Every incident of the day bore the semblance of a genuine personal triumph. Two years and seven months ago the aged "revolutionist," who reads books, mounted his horse before the capital building in Saltillo, where he had long been governor of the state of Coahuila, bade farewell to his family, and a few friends and started over the mountains alone to sound the battle cry of revolution.

Once again Carranza stood before the old capital building. At his right stood General Obregon, at his left Jesus Acuna, his secretary of foreign relations, who joined the triumphal party at Monterey. It was a bright sunny day. The whole town seemed to have crowded into the square.

The first chief was met at the railroad station by his wife and relatives, and his local revolutionist leaders. He walked from the station to the capital through streets packed with the populace.

The Carranza party will leave here for Torreon, Villa's old headquarters. Carranza will return here next week, spend several days with his family and proceed to Vera Cruz by way of Monterey, Victoria and Tampico.

CHARGE ALLEGED SHORTAGE

Madison County Man Involved to the Amount of $4,451.54.

Indianapolis, Oct. 18.—Richard M. Milburn, attorney general, has certified to the prosecutor of Madison county charges against William W. Brown, trustee of Green township, Madison county, which aggregate $4,451.54. The charges are the result of an investigation by the state board of accounts into Brown's books.

Brown, with his son, George W. Brown, was indicted for the killing of Albert Hawkins, a constable of Anderson, some time ago, and the father, in a trial at Marion, was convicted of involuntary manslaughter and sentenced to a term of two to twenty-one years in prison. He appealed the case to the supreme court, where the decision was affirmed and the case now is pending before the supreme court on a petition for rehearing.

WILSON A CULTURED TENOR

"He Has a Beautiful Voice," Says Miss Margaret.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 18.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the president, disclosed to the world that her father is a cultured tenor. "He has a beautiful voice," she said, "it is really of fine quality, but he has not sung professionally, excepting in a male quartet at college."

Miss Wilson, who is to give a recital here Tuesday, said she preferred the artistic career to that of the social one and that her sole ambition in life is to sing. "Society is not a career," she said.

No Race Suicide Here.

FIVE BURN TO DEATH IN TENEMENT FIRE

Score or More Injured; Others Were Saved.

New York, Oct. 18.—In a fire that swept through a five-story tenement at 1217 Third avenue, five persons were burned to death.

Two others are dying, a score or more are suffering from severe injuries. The lives of many others who were imperilled were saved.

The dead: Mrs. Nettie Gloch, thirty-four years old; Irving Gloch, four; Mrs. Julia Wenz, thirty-eight; Anna Wenz, fifteen; Mae Wenz, thirteen. Seriously injured: Charles O'Brien, thirty years old, and Mrs. Carrie O'Brien, twenty-six.

Eight families live in the houses and on the ground floor were two stores. Adjoining the building in north is the Central hotel at One Hundred and Sixteenth street, and it was from this building that the majority of the other tenants, almost suffocated and unable to help themselves, were taken to safety by detectives, who formed a human chain along the window ledges of the burning structure.

The bodies of Mrs. Wenz and her two daughters were found in their beds. They had been suffocated before they could make any effort to escape. The bodies were identified by the husband and father, John Wenz, who was not at home when the fire started.

WILL VOTE ON SUFFRAGE

Success in New Jersey Election Predicted by Women.

New York, Oct. 18.—New Jersey will vote on the woman suffrage proposition and the result is expected to have a far-reaching effect upon similar elections on Nov. 2, in New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. Every indication points to a comparatively light vote and both sides are claiming victory.

Mrs. Lillian J. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage association, predicts that the suffrage amendment will be adopted by a majority of not less than 25,000.

Mrs. E. Yarde Breeze, president of the New Jersey association, opposed to woman suffrage, declares that the antis are going to win.

Men accustomed to forecasting elections, are not committing themselves on guesses of any kind for the state.

INSISTS CARSON RESIGNED

London Paper Emphatic Attorney-General Has Quit.

London, Oct. 18.—Notwithstanding the recent denial of Sir Edward Carson, the attorney-general, that he had resigned, the assertion is made by the parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News that he has given up his office.

Announcement to this effect is withheld by the government, the correspondent says, because of its hope that in the interests of unity he may be persuaded to withdraw his resignation, the reason for which, it is said, has not been ascertained.

NEW WIRELESS INVENTION

Apparatus to Do Away With Steel Towers Is Perfected.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 18.—Wireless telegraphy invention eliminating the present towering steel structures for sending and receiving by simply projecting a short wire along the ground, was announced here by R. B. Woolverton, United States radio inspector.

In collaboration with Palmer B. Hewitt of Hollister, Cal., Mr. Wolverton has been experimenting for many months with the new apparatus. Its discoverers assert the new method had proved eminently successful in receiving messages from Honolulu Sayville and Arlington, Va. Freedom from static conditions has been achieved in the reception of messages, but lesser success has been attained in transmitting messages.

S. S. S. Greatest Blood Remedy Gives Results When Others Fail

Nature's Remedy For Blood Troubles.

The purifying and curative properties of Nature's great remedy have made "S. S. S. for the Blood" a household saying. Thousands today enjoying perfect health owe their recovery from blood or skin diseases to this universally used blood purifier. S. S. S. is made entirely from roots, herbs and barks, which possess cleansing and healing ingredients. You cannot be well when your blood is impure; you lack strength and energy natural with health; your complexion becomes pale and sallow; your vitality is weakened. When waste or refuse matter, which Nature intends shall be thrown off, is left in the system, it is absorbed into the blood and boils, pimples, rashes, blotches and other eruptions of the skin appear.

S. S. S. goes into the circulation and removes every particle of blood taint or poison of every character. All skin diseases and eruptions pass away, and the smooth clear skin, glowing with health, shows that the body is being nourished by rich, pure blood. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula, Contagious Blood Poison, all are deep-seated blood disorders, and for their treatment nothing equals S. S. S. Get S. S. S. at any drug store. If yours is a peculiar case write S. S. S. Co., Atlanta, Ga.

CHAPTER VI.

When, just before sunset yesterday afternoon, a verdict of acquittal for Cal Douglas had come from the jury room, the town of Peril had once more held its breath and doors had closed and the streets had cleared of such as wished to remain noncombatants. But with no comment or criticism Milt McBriar mounted his horse and rode out of town, shaping his course over the hills toward his own house. Following his example with equal quiet, his kinsmen mounted, too, and disappeared.

As for Cal Douglas, he reserved any enthusiasm his vindication may have brought to his heart until he was back again in the depths of the hills. He and his kinsmen turned their horses by a shorter and steeper trail to the house where the dance was going forward with shuffling and fiddling and passing of the jug.

When Milt McBriar and his fellows started home an informer or two from the Havey ranks kept them in view, themselves unseen, until they passed through the gap and started down the other side of the ridge into their own domain.

That they were being so watched was either known to the McBriars or assumed by them. But a picked squad on fresh mounts was waiting over there in a place where the road ran deep through the forest and laurel, and this squad was equipped with repeating rifles. Milt McBriar himself did not go with them. He had made all his arrangements in advance, and it was not seemly that the chief should take a personal part in an execution which he had decreed.

"Let me hear the news, boys," Old Milt had said with a wave of his hand, and then he had ridden on stolidly toward his own domain.

The house where the dance was being held stood between the knees of two hills.

Near midnight a half-dozen men who had not been invited rode carefully over an almost obliterated trail which wound blindly through the hills at the back of the place and hitched their horses in a rock-surrounded hollow a half-mile from the house. Other horses and mules were hitched all along the country road, but these belonged to the legitimate guests.

As the half-dozen men, whose arrival had been so cautiously accomplished, began slipping down, each holding his own course in the cover of the laurel, there was nothing to indicate that any warning had gone ahead of them.

From the houses with their yellow windows and their open doors came no note of apprehension—no intimation of suspicion. A medley of voices, now and then a laugh, a din of scraping feet, and the whine and boom of fiddles gave out a careless chorus to the night.

Slowly, with an adept craft that hardly broke a twig underfoot, three of the new arrivals hitched their way forward to a point of vantage down near the road.

They went crouched low, holding to the shadows with rifles thrust out ahead and faces almost smiling in their grim foretaste of sure success. In a few moments they would have before them the doors and windows as lighted targets. Then whoever saw Cal Douglas would crook forefinger on trigger and the error of the jury would be rectified. The others would follow with a volley at random for good measure.

It was almost too easy. It seemed a shame to snatch a full and red revenge with such scant effort.

Then, as the foremost figure, crouching in easy range of a window, braced himself on one knee and peered toward under his upturned hat-brim, there came the reports of several rifles—but they were not the rifles of the McBriar squad, and they came not from the hills in front, but from the laurel at the back. They broke from directly between the carefully picked squad and its horses.

The man who had braced his knee and cocked his rifle gave out a brief, gurgling sound as an oath was stifled off in a hemorrhage of the throat, and pitched forward on his face. After that the figure lay without stirring, its own blood reddening the rifle whose trigger-guard pressed against its forehead.

The doors vomited men. There was a trailing and ragged outburst of fire-arms, and many dark figures plunged here and there across the silvered spaces where the shadows did not fall.

Of the six men who had crept down, three had lain within one hundred yards of the house when the shots came from their rear. The other three were off at the side, ready to bring up the horses as close as might prove safe when the moment came for flight. But they, too, found themselves cut off. Had the man who fired on the one who was about to fire waited one minute longer, there would have been more deaths than the single one. His colleagues would then have been, like himself, covering their respective victims—victims who confidently thought themselves executioners. But as it was, they had not quite yet worked themselves into positions untrammelled by intervening rock and timber.

The man who fired first knew this, for he had not heard the perfectly imitated quaver of "scritch-owls" which was to signify a common readiness. But as he had eyed his crouching victim across his rifle-sights he had also been able to look beyond him, and had seen the figure of Cal Douglas pause at the lighted window. He knew that to wait a moment would be to wait too long. So the others had to fire blindly through the black undergrowth at speeding shadows—and they missed.

The fleeing murder squad melted back into the black timber, and some of them, signaling with the call of frog and owl, came together in temporary safety. They dared not go to their own horses, since they might be discovered in the effort. The road that led into the McBriar country would be watched. If they were to carry away unpunctured skins they must flee the other way—into the Havey territory and astride stolen Havey horses. It was every man for himself, and they had not paused to count noses. They hurriedly swung themselves into saddles at the remote end of the line of hitched mounts and galloped pell-mell down the road toward the cabin of Fletch McNash.

When the theft of the horses was discovered Anse Havey sent pursuing parties to ride the roads in both directions. It had seemed to Havey wiser to withhold his warning from all save those whom he needed to use. To all the rest the affair had come without notice, and the hue and cry which followed the rifle-shots was genuine in its excitement.

But in a very few moments the pandemonium fell away and sullenness supplanted the shouting. The mountains behind, where several men were stealthily seeking escape and many others were stalking them, lay silent in the moonlight.

A hundred yards beyond the window a small and inquisitive knot of men gathered around a figure that had hunched forward, sprawling on a cocked rifle. Someone turned the figure up and straightened its limbs so that they should not stiffen in such grotesque attitude. The face, with the yellow lantern-light shining down on it, was the face of a boy of twenty. Its thin lips were set in a grim smile of satisfaction, for death had overtaken him without a suspicion of its coming.

Perhaps, had a photograph of his retina been taken, it would have disclosed the portrait of Cal Douglas pausing at the open window.

"Hit's little Nash Watt!" exclaimed a surprised voice, using the diminutive which in the mountains takes the place of junior and stays with a man well on in life. The victim who had been designated to avenge the death of Noah Watt had been Noah Watt's younger brother.

Meanwhile the pursuing horsemen were gaining slowly on those that fled. The murder squad had failed and must bear back to Milt McBriar, if they ever got back, a narrative of frustrated effort. They were bitterly angry and proportionately desperate. So, as they clattered along the empty road, meeting no enemy whom they could shoot down in appeasement of their wrath, they satisfied themselves with raising their war cry for the benefit of the sleeping cabins.

A little distance beyond Fletch McNash's place lay a cross-trail by which they might find a circuitous way back over the ridge, but it was too steep and broken to ride. They could make better time on foot over the "roughs," so there they abandoned their mounts and plunged into the timber. When the pursuers came up with the discarded horses they realized that further effort in the nighttime would be bootless. Yet, since the heaving flanks and panting nostrils of the horses testified that they had been only a few minutes late, they took a last chance and plunged into the thicket.

There a single defiant shot, sent from a long way up the hillside, was their only challenge, and their volley of reply, fired at the flash, was merely a retort of hatred. But even in the isolation of the hills certain news travels on wings, and the morning would find every cabin dweller wearing a face of grim and sullen realization. The phrase which Fletch McNash had whispered to his boy would travel to the headwaters of every fork, and the faces of the women would once more wear the drawn misery of anxiety for their men.

SEYMOUR PEOPLE PRAISE SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many in Seymour praise the simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Alder-i-ka. This remedy is the most THOROUGH bowel cleanser ever sold being even used successfully in appendicitis. ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour or gassy stomach. ONE MINUTE after you take it the gasses' rumble and pass out. Alder-i-ka cannot gripe and the INSTANT action is surprising. C. E. Loertz, Advertisement.

OPEN INDIANA CENTENNIAL

First Celebration to Open at Corydon May 13, 1916.

Corydon, Ind., Oct. 18.—The Indiana centennial commission, which here fixed May 13, 1916, as the date for the initial centennial celebration at Corydon, the first state capital.

The date was agreed upon because delegates to the first constitutional convention were elected May 13, 1816. Other celebrations will follow at various points in the state and the final celebration will be held in Indianapolis at a date not yet agreed upon. The meeting was held in the old state capital. All of the ten members with the exception of Governor Ralston, were in attendance. Miss Della Hunt of Perry county, Miss Genevieve Williams of Huntington and Howard Roosa, editor of the Evansville Courier, were present as district representatives of the commission.

BANK TELLER IS MISSING

Charged With Shortage of About $2,500 in Accounts.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 18.—Officers of the Commercial bank of this city announce an alleged shortage in the accounts of Henry Flentke, twenty-two years old, a teller. The alleged irregularities extend over a period of a year.

An examination of the bank's accounts, completed by Bank Examiner Hoch of Rockport, is said to have shown that the shortage would not exceed $2,500.

The attention of the bank officers was first directed to irregularities where a dormant account was found to be short.

An examination was ordered and Flentke is said to have dashed to the Louisville & Nashville railroad station and taken a train west.

HER STRANGE SCHOLAR

By KEITH KENYON.

The December sunshine streamed through the windows of the school-room where Elsin Dorr taught and played with her kindergarten babies. There were fifteen of the youngsters sitting in their little chairs around the wide circle chalked on the schoolroom floor and Elsin, at the piano, led them in singing "Good-Morning, Merry Sunshine; How Do You Do Today?"

The first line was barely finished when Elsin became conscious of a new voice—a little boy's strong treble without the faintest appreciation of tune.

At the end of the first verse, Elsin turned to the circle and discovered the cause of the flutter of excitement among her pupils as well as the owner of the discordant voice.

Seated cross-legged on the floor, in the middle of the circle, was a strange little boy, a winsome-faced lad of five years, with big brown eyes and a curly mop of flaxen hair. He wore a Russian blouse of blue serge and bore every appearance of having come from a comfortable home and the loving hands of a mother.

"Good-morning!" cried Elsin, a little breathlessly. "We are very glad to see you. Will you come and tell me your name?"

The small visitor got up and came to Elsin's knee, putting up a wistful mouth to be kissed.

"Tell me your name, dear," urged Elsin.

"Jonathan Ferdinand Marbridge," returned the child.

"That is a very nice name, Jonathan," said Elsin. "Now you must tell me who brought you to school this morning."

"I came myself—Dobbin is down in the yard."

"Who is Dobbin, dear?"

"He is my pony. Don't you know him? I told him I was coming this morning and so he brought me. I've been wanting to come for a long, long time, and daddy said he'd see about it, but he is a very busy man." Jonathan puffed out his chest and looked very important.

"Very well, Jonathan, you may fetch a little chair into the circle and I will send word to your father that you are here."

But it was a difficult matter to discover the residence of Jonathan Ferdinand Marbridge and Dobbin, his piebald pony. No one in Wildwood appeared to recognize the name of Marbridge and even the central telephone exchange could give no clue to the identity of the little boy's parents.

"I will hold the bridle and Dobbin must show me the way to your house," said Elsin, pulling her white woolly cap over her bronze-brown hair.

"Dobbin knows the way," said Jonathan confidently.

"Do you live in Oakland Plains, Jonathan?" she asked. "And your mother, dear? Won't she worry about you?"

"I haven't any mother any more, Miss Elsin—she is with God. There's no one 'cept daddy and Mrs. Wickham and Sarah and the other servants."

So Dobbin led the way, and finally they emerged into tall oak woods, and in the distance was a snow-swept stretch of lawn with great groups of magnificent trees surrounding a long, rambling red brick mansion.

"That's my house," cried Jonathan excitedly, "and there is daddy, running—I wonder what is the matter? Perhaps the house is on fire," he added complacently.

A tall man without, hat or overcoat was running rapidly toward them. "My little lad!" The man snatched the boy from the saddle and held him close to his heart.

Elsin answered his questioning eyes by telling him how she had discovered the child sitting in the middle of her kindergarten class. "We tried to find his people, but could not locate anyone of the name of Marbridge," she said.

"No wonder! Marbridge is only one of Jonathan's many names. He is Jonathan Ferdinand Marbridge-Harcourt—named for two grandfathers. He often neglects to add the paternal surname. I am deeply grateful, Miss Dorry. You have had a long walk through the snow. Will you not come to the house and let Mrs. Wickham, my housekeeper, give you a cup of tea, and then I will take you home in my car?"

"Please do, Miss Elsin, dear," pleaded Jonathan.

After that memorable day Jonathan Ferdinand Marbridge-Harcourt came to Miss Dorr's kindergarten every morning. But the faithful Dobbin did not bring him. Mr. Harcourt was never too busy to give his little son over to Woodbine street, nor was he too busy to visit the school very frequently. Indeed, one day he became a member of the charmed circle and told such wonderful stories that the children tore themselves reluctantly away to play in the April sunshine.

And one day Mr. Harcourt crowned his reputation as a story-teller by telling Elsin Dorr the most wonderful story that she had ever heard. And Elsin listened and believed—even when he called himself her model scholar. For he had faithfully learned the lesson she had taught him—to love her.

DENY RUMOR PAGE HAD QUIT

American Ambassador at London Has Not Resigned His Post.

London, Oct. 18.—A report was current in London that the American ambassador, Walter H. Page, had sent a cablegram to Washington offering his resignation from the ambassadorship. Mr. Page, who was apprised of the report, said:

"There is no truth in such a report. I have not resigned and I have taken no action which would justify a rumor to that effect."

In what way the rumor arose is not known.

AFTER SUFFERING TWO LONG YEARS

Mrs. Aselin Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"After my little one was born I was sick with pains in my sides which the doctors said were caused by inflammation. I suffered a great deal every month and grew very thin. I was under the doctor's care for two long years without any benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try it we got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the third bottle of the Compound I was able to do my housework and today I am strong and healthy again. I will answer letters if anyone wishes to know about my case."—Mrs. JOSEPH ASELIN, 606 Fourth Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine why don't you try it?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

"FALL RALLY" SERVICES WELL ATTENDED SUNDAY

Evangelist Fred R. Davies Spoke in Evening on Theme "Is The Young Man in Seymour Safe?"

Three services at the "Fall Rally" were well attended yesterday in the Central Christian Church. Last night speaking to the theme, "Is the Young Man Safe?" Mr. Davies said that this question was of the greatest importance to all the leaders of tomorrow, in nation, state, education will be taken from the boys of today. If they are of high moral fibre, lofty ambition, the future of the land is assured. These boys will marry our girls and if they are clean and worthy, happy homes will be a certainty. The safety of the young man is of tremendous importance to father, mother, as their declining years will be helped or hurt by the lives of the children. The subject for tonight: "The Supreme Labor."

public. He was interested in the welfare and advancement of the city. At the time of his death he was president of the board of trustees of the Schneck Memorial Hospital and of the Farmers' Club. He was also treasurer of the Seymour Commercial Club. His entire life was one of unusual activity.

The funeral services will be conducted from the Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the Rev. J. H. Carnes, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiating. Private services will be held at the residence at 1:30 o'clock. The funeral will be in charge of the Masonic order. Burial at Riverview cemetery.

TRIBUTES TO CAREER OF JOEL H. MATLOCK

The high esteem in which the late Joel H. Matlock was held in business and social circles is shown by the following tributes.

C. D. Billings, president of First National Bank: "J. H. Matlock was a man of strong personality. He had good ability and this, combined with his forceful nature, made him successful in anything he undertook. One of the notable things in his life to me was the genuine affection he had for his family. My personal relations with Mr. Matlock both in a business and social way were always most congenial and pleasant."

H. C. Johnson, president of the Seymour National Bank: "From close association one could only love and admire Joel H. Matlock for his beautiful traits of character. I was closely associated with him as the first treasurer of the Jackson County Loan & Trust Company."

J. H. Andrews, cashier of the First National Bank: "I have known Mr. Matlock as a friend all of my life and as a business man during his residence in Seymour. He was a man of great personal worth and held in high esteem by all who came in contact with him."

J. S. Mills, cashier of the Seymour National Bank: "Associated with Mr. Matlock as a banker and also as a neighbor, I found him a true friend and business man of sterling qualities."

Charles Roeger, Second Vice-president of Jackson County Loan & Trust Company: "I have known Joel H. Matlock for twenty-five years. He was an excellent man, honest, upright and a valuable citizen. His death is a loss to the community."

T. M. Honan, former attorney-general of Indiana: "Joel H. Matlock was one of the most careful and painstaking men I ever came in contact with. He was conscientious about his affairs, and his death removes a valuable citizen."

FUNERAL OF WELL KNOWN WOMAN LARGELY ATTENDED

Nephews and Grandsons of Mrs. Catherine Hauenschield Were the Pallbearers.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Catherine Hauenschield was held at the German M. E. church Sunday afternoon and was largely attended. Many of the friends of the deceased were unable to find standing room in the auditorium. The services were in charge of the pastor, the Rev. W. A. Schruoff, assisted by the Rev. J. H. Carnes, pastor of the First M. E. church.

The high esteem in which the deceased was held was indicated by the numerous floral tokens. She had many relatives and friends throughout the county. The granddaughters acted as flower bearers. The pall bearers were the nephews and grandsons of Mrs. Hauenschield. They were: Henry Fosbrink, Wyer Gossman, Henry Ernst, Kenneth Hauenschield, Fred Peter and Alfred Reynolds.
